put together
put in space by the creators of the exhibitory situation humans brains flesh and blood some food little excercise a lot of carrying alcohol sleep or no sleep now we are here in space this space at this point in time in this country what country does it matterer what matters is all creators are enrolled at an art institution that offers 4 year-long bachelor in fine arts so we are here

t o g e t h e r

with you
you are very important we are happy to meet you because there was potential that we wouldn't who are we doing it for we are not sure can you tell us

def. to catalogue

do you remember history there are stories behind this situation constructs are you aware who are you to know do you know it started at some point and continues paintings were hung on the wall very busy wall a heavy burden for the wall the wall why are we so obsessed with the wall if you do not want it to have a presence just put it in the drawer did anyone ever thought how the wall feels when it's being covered a wall has a spatial special role what makes you think you can cover it should always be nice and pretty sellable attractive to a pencil dealer from new york do not stand out hang on a wall keep a manageable size make it pretty pretty art is about the universal supreme neutrality makes it relatable to everyone do not exclude do not adress let others wonder why did you chose this colour why did you present it together not seperately it could also work is there space in there for you def. to construct contextualisation critical reflection what is it that interests me predominantly about this peculiar position of presenting ideas i thought of on a bike to a group audience assesors friends strangers neighbours angry neighbours

people people people simple simple i give you this because this is the only concrete information you'll get here also not that concrete because what does it mean actually defines our actions what if the words disappear what if there is no line between the in and the out let the work be fluid spill over you your thoughts your unintended intentions there is only ambiguity yet art uses money as a definition define it for me why did you come here what do you want from us what do you want from this experience we don't sell drinks being social is exhausting better stay home home home let my home be here let me ask you questions questions questions i know no small talk let it be be there in space spaced out art yet you want to be here experience this is all so prescious so pure so fragile too soon will be corrupt degraded we all just want to afford some chleb done with the commentary my words take up space but lets not make it about them it is them it is us here to see view look at admire hate work it is a spatial situation

your body moves through the space you stop to talk look observe contemplate wherever you begin you are always going to end up leaving abandoning the object situation thought substance me them the context there is only one entrence and one exit this will end tonight perhaps never perhaps it has just started e x i t

we walked through the same doors yet we walked through differently you walked like you and i walked like i was supposed to did you walk like you were supposed to is my sense of space real while i have been here before it will end take your time but don't forget to leave don't forget
